Tech Mahindra as Oracle(PL/SQL) developer

Apr 2011 to Oct 2013

Project - PACS (rPACS) Client - British Telecom

Duration - April 2011 - October 2013

Planning Assignment and Configuration System is an application that British Telecom uses for managing their Telecom Network and its inventory. It is a successful subsystem, which has been providing product for operation, maintenance and security for entire BT customers.

PACS is used by the customer, BT Exact, for network management, inventory management and provisioning of extremely high capacity communication paths over its Synchronous Digital Hierarchy (SDH), Wavelength Division Multiplexer (WDM) and Ethernet (ETH) network. PACS is built on the Windows platform, using Developer 2000 (Forms 6i) as the front-end and Oracle PL/SQL at the back-end. With the up gradation of the project release by release deliverables, we support all the critical functionalities. To enhance the project technically we had re-factored it with new technologies using Flex, Java as front end and Oracle PL-SQL as back end. The refactored name is rPACS.

PACS provides tools to:

Manage the Life-Cycle of SDH, WDM, and ETH equipments.

Manage orders (circuits) on SDH, WDM, and ETH equipment based on customer's requests.

Manage existing services.

The actual data is modeled in the PACS database.

PACS works as Cross Domain Planner. It deals with many interfaces. It gives the ability to allow network planners to plan equipment from NTE to the Metro Core.
